There is no doubt about it: the effects of this pandemic have been hard on everyone. These past three years have been dominated by isolation, fear, uncertainty, and exhaustion. Today's youth, who are arguably amidst one of their most significant and challenging life developmental stages, have especially struggled in the context of the pandemic. This two-part series of Truth Talks taught by Mount Olivet Counseling Service Director, Sherri Herman, MA, LPCC, aims to help our youth, and those who love them, connect with the emotional realities of the pandemic and engage in strategies to enhance resilience and support spiritual formation.
